MISSION:

Camp Stanley Storage Activity (CSSA) mission is to receive, test, store, ship, renovate and demilitarize conventional arms, ammunition, and explosives in support of the Warfighter worldwide.

FORCE MULTIPLIER:

Camp Stanley Storage Activity (CSSA) stands as a critical pillar of America's national defense, ensuring that our military remains equipped, prepared, and capable of protecting freedom at home and abroad. At CSSA, the mission is clear and unwavering: to receive, test, store, ship, renovate, and demilitarize conventional arms, ammunition, and explosives in support of the Warfighter. Every step of this mission reflects a steadfast commitment to the safety and readiness of our armed forces, ensuring that those on the front lines have the reliable tools they need to defend the American way of life.

Behind the gates of CSSA, skilled professionals work with precision and purpose to maintain and modernize the resources essential to our nation's defense. By safely demilitarizing obsolete munitions and carefully managing the life cycle of critical assets, CSSA not only ensures operational efficiency, but also exemplifies responsible stewardship of resources and the environment. For the American people, this work is about more than logistics—it is a testament to the unwavering resolve and dedication that keep our military strong and our nation secure, now and for generations to come.

CAPABILITIES:

- Global munitions logistics support
- Storage and surveillance of munitions
- Distribution of munitions
- Maintenance and modification of munitions
- Machining, fabrication, assembly and repair
- Performance testing of munitions and explosives

HISTORY:

Camp Stanley Storage Activity began operations at Camp Stanley in 1958. In 1906 and 1907, an area of about 17,000 acres near Leon Springs, just north of San Antonio, was acquired by the military as a training ground and firing range. In 1917, the area was named Camp Funston in honor of Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston but was redesignated Camp Stanley after learning there was already a Camp Funston in Kansas. Camp Stanley is named after Brig. Gen. David S. Stanley, a Medal of Honor recipient during the Civil War and a former Commander of the Department of Texas.

The camp was used as a training ground during World War I and hosted the First Officers' Training Camp and later the 57th Infantry Regiment, which included then Lt. Dwight D. Eisenhower. In 1917, an additional 16,000 acres were leased, and a new camp was established called Camp Bullis. Together, Camp Stanley and Camp Bullis became the Leon Spring Military Reservation.

Today, Camp Bullis serves as a training base for Army, Air Force, and Marine units, while Camp Stanley is used for munitions storage and testing.

FACILITIES:

CSSA is housed on approximately 4,000 acres with over 100 buildings, 120 magazines and a storage capacity of over 500,000 square feet.
